Subject: Microsoft's monopoly moving into schools.

The decision to have Microsoft donate its software to schools is not a wise choice. It is the only place that they have not dominated the market. Have Microsoft donate the cash to the schools and let them decide which OS's to run and it will eliminate the cost/value debate of Microsoft's software.

This would roughly equate to a tobacco company opting to give out free smokes to kids rather than paying to find a cure for cancer.
